PHOTO PAGE

Below is as full a listing as possible of the aircraft operated by the Royal Thai Navy; an attempt has been made to list the aircraft chronologically. Confirmed corrections and additions would be very welcome to steveozel@outlook.com

The listing is largely based on personal observations and research, with thanks also due to the Royal Thai Navy, many Air Britain publications, Malcolm Fillmore (Tiger Moths), Jeremy Parkin (helicopters), Aad Neeven (F-27's), Marco Dijkshoorn (Scramble), Derek King, Jack Friell (Albatross's), Ed Young's "Aerial Nationalism – A History of Aviation in Thailand" (Smithsonian 1995), Erik van Helvoort (visit report), Bob Boxhill (visit report), Dave Wilton (USN data), Peter-Michael Gerhardt (German types), Jan Forsgren, Jack Friell (HU-16's), George Kernahan (USN data), Phil Yeadon, the 'Scramble' team, Gordon Wimmer and others. Thanks are due to Vidya Tapasanan for information on Japanese aircraft operated by the Royal Thai Navy.

MAP data below is largely courtesy of Sid Nanson plus the NARA archive at <http://aad.archives.gov/aad/series-description.jsp?s=3284&cat=GS30&bc=sl>. Note that all FY 1963 dates mean 1963 or earlier; eg. the Helldivers listed as FY 1963 were in fact delivered in 1951.

The Royal Thai Navy first established an air arm on 01Jun38. After World War Two the Naval Air Wing was reorganized as a major unit under the direct command of the Royal Thai Navy on 17Jly48. According to the British Naval Attaché, on 01Dec49 the naval air arm had 33 officers and 433 men, largely at Sattahip. A new naval air base was established at Chantaburi 1949. Following their support for an unsuccessful coup in June 1951 all their aircraft (including Helldivers, Magisters, Widgeons, Bonanzas etc) were transferred to the Thai Air Force, where they formed Wing 7 at Don Mueang; other aircraft intended for the Navy such as the Fireflies were delivered directly to the Air Force. The Royal Thai Navy officially regained its air wing, in principle, on 18Oct60 and, in practice in Jun62 with delivery of two HU-16 Albatross. On 09Aug66 the Royal Thai Navy took over U-Tapao airbase, to where they relocated their Air Wing from Don Mueang on 01Sep67.

Serial number system

Initially, until the 1970's, aircraft usually wore serials derived from their previous USAF serial, BuNo or c/n, e.g. Tracker '415' was ex Bu136415. Since then however the serial has been based on the squadron allocation.

A three-figure system was first in use. The first figure denoted the Squadron and the last two the individual aircraft serial, e.g. Bell 212 '405' was 4 Squadron aircraft 5.

In the early 1990's (before 1996) however the unit designations were extended, and a four-figure aircraft serial system introduced. The first two numbers denote the unit, and the last two the individual aircraft serial. For example, Cessna T337 '1311' is 103 Squadron ('13') aircraft 11; AV-8S '3104' is 301 Squadron ('31') aircraft 4.

Certain aircraft span all three systems, e.g. Tracker Bu136416 has been serialised 416, 102 and 1102 successively.

Type Designations

Aircraft are also issued type designations, which are generally worn on the aircraft. Known are:-
